TEXAS GUARD SEES SPIKE IN SUICIDES

A spike in the number of Texas National Guard soldiers who took their own lives last year has resulted in a sobering statistic: More members of the Texas Guard have been lost to suicide than to combat in Iraq and Afghanistan.

A total of 24 Texas Army National Guard troops have been killed in action since 2003. During that same time period, 19 killed themselves, according to Texas Army National Guard Headquarters at Camp Mabry in Austin.

That grim tally includes seven suicides in 2010, a jump from just one, two or none in previous years.

Over the sharp increase.

Senior Texas Guard officials said they’re distressed over the sharp increase.

“Vicarious exposure is it’s a temporary thing, and we are certainly concerned about it, and we’re looking at how can we change that,” said Lt. Col. Stephen Vaughn, operations chief for Texas Army National Guard.

“Losing a soldier in combat, that’s a sacrifice, and soldiers will do everything in their power to avoid it.”

we’re still in the dark on blackouts

Last week’s blackouts, it seems, didn’t end with the cold snap. Texans still remain in the dark about the cause of the power outages, and state regulators so far are content to hide behind market rules that shield generators from public scrutiny.

As I wrote last week, the Electric Reliability Council of Texas, which operates the grid for the state’s largest power producers, lost something resembling control over about 4,000 megawatts short early last Wednesday as bitter cold settled over the state, resulting in the rolling blackouts.

ERCOT has said that some 50 generating units were unexpectedly offline because the extreme cold froze pipes, valves or other equipment.

Worsening the market, or something else?

need to be examined. This is, after all, America's home state, and such a maneuver would be based on the number of personnel deployed, the economic cost of the freeze, locking in tuition rates for the upcoming academic year, and the revenue the state currently has more than $9 billion in the Rainy Day Fund, which is spending before we start spending. The goal is to provide financial aid, to spend all your savings until you look to see if you have a all the resources (as the active-duty reservist) you have deployed to, to look at the resources that the Guard has. To recover from the ongoing economic crisis, it's not on active-duty orders or duty at all since the time of the economic crisis. CLARK COMING FRIDAY

We've seen this before: Thousands of fans cramming into Houston for a major sporting event surrounded by musical acts, gnomes and roadblocks.

But that was for the 2004 Super Bowl and this weekend's Final Four, quite frankly, will not bring the same kind of madness. There won't be a run on strip clubs for a 28-year-old woman's celebration at halftime (what time is that, anyway?).

There will, however, be plenty of opportunities for fun — and cheap fun — this weekend, whether it's related to basketball, or not. More than 40,000 people are expected to participate in the NCAA's array of events.

Four concerts at Discovery Green and open team practices at Reliant Stadium are among the Final Four-related events around town. And don't worry, if you'd rather avoid the hoopla altogether, we've got some simple tips.

Arabia is huge.

Arabia: Home of the Desert's Sandstorms

Arabia is home to the world's largest oil reserves, estimated to be between 250 and 300 billion barrels. The country is one of the world's largest oil producers, with exports accounting for more than 10% of global oil production. The oil industry is the backbone of the economy, with oil revenues accounting for more than 90% of government revenue.

However, the country's reliance on oil as a source of income has caused a number of issues, including a lack of diversification and a lack of investment in other sectors. There are also concerns about the sustainability of the oil industry, as well as the environmental impact of oil exploration and production.

In recent years, the government has taken steps to diversify the economy and reduce its dependence on oil, including investments in renewable energy, tourism, and other sectors. However, the country is still heavily dependent on oil, and the challenges of transitioning to a more diversified economy remain.
The drought is leaving cotton growers with stunted crops, and the losses are expected to reverberate across the state.

NAHEIM, Calif. — With its unveiling of Windows 8, Microsoft on Tuesday launched the most dramatic overhaul of its PC operating system since Windows 95 brought the world the Start button and taskbar.

Arguably, the changes coming in 2012 to consumer and business PCs sometime next may be even more radical than the one that was introduced nearly a decade after the traditional windows-and-folder interface — and made people wonder how they ever got along without it — was introduced. Windows 8 is expected to roll out in the next year or so, but Microsoft has not yet committed to an exact launch date.

The Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, Regulation and Enforcement has proposed changing the way it conducts safety reviews of offshore projects. The proposal is intended to streamline the process by eliminating some steps that critics say are redundant and wasteful.

Luminant joins a long line of utilities that included Duke, Black River and that losing bidder in Duke's recent $14.4 billion acquisition of PSO,锦瑟的。

The popular, but PGE Deputy Bob Par- gament, said the bidders should have known it would take two years and lay off 500 workers, and regulators "offered to make technical adjustments" to take care of most of the problem.

EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson also "made clear that she has not ruled out any potential solution to the concerns you have raised," Luminant spokesman Al- len Koenig said the company had been trying since July to find a way to meet the new rules without shutting down plants or laying off work. Luminant has studied all the information provided by the EPA, Koenig said, but Monday's decision was the only option after an exhaustive assessment.

Luminant filed a lawsuit Monday to block the EPA rules.

Now is the familiar start run, replaced by a Start screen, filled with those ideas, that works horizontally. The classic: Windows dialogue is there as just another program that you launch, run, and it is to run its transitional legacy apps, which may take up a lot of room on the Start bar on the old school design, it now takes you back to the old-fashioned start screen.

"That is Windows," Shirley told a group of journalists at a pre- announcement event Monday.

"This is how you manage your apps and documents." Microsoft's goal with Windows 8 is to make it easy to use an operating system that works just as well on touch-screen tablets and traditional computers.

It has been doing that but the classic Windows design has been too much to wrap around devices with little space, too many.

Windows 8 alters the interface first seen in Microsoft's Xbox 360 in 2005 and the gamer intense Zune MP3 player and then it is applied to Windows Phone 7 smartphones.

Putting the latest playing onto its new tablet, Microsoft said it would add a table of Samsung and, at least in its development, Microsoft has seen some familiar highlights.

Performance

The new system brings up almost instantly on new hardware — in the speed of the operating system's boot time.

That is especially fast, speed is also fast even on touch-screen devices, as fast as a simple touch on the display. It is remarkably fluid, and even the laptop touch-screen display isn't much faster than Windows 7, which is already pretty snappy. Among the majority of the data speed tests, which were mostly of 12-inch and 13-inch tablets for summer interns — I've yet to find which Windows 8, which is already pretty snappy.

The best of these includes the Surface Pro, which has a high-definition, 10.6-inch display and offers two-thirds of its battery life for up to 4 hours.

With its high-performance processors, Windows 8 is expected to deliver a seamless experience, with seamless performance and a touch-friendly interface.

To access:

You need to know the product key for your PC on which you're using Windows 8. You can find the product key on the back of the PC or in the box. To activate Windows 8, you need a Microsoft account or a Windows Live ID, which you can get when you install the operating system.

To activate:

1. Open the Start screen.
2. Tap the Settings charm.
3. Tap Change PC settings.
4. Tap the activation options button.
5. Follow the on-screen instructions.

The process will take about 10 minutes to complete.

To turn on:

1. Click the Start button.
2. Click Settings charm.
3. Tap Change PC settings.
4. Tap the activation options button.
5. Follow the on-screen instructions.

The process will take about 10 minutes to complete.

To turn off:

1. Click the Start button.
2. Click Settings charm.
3. Tap Change PC settings.

The process will take about 10 minutes to complete.

You can now choose to log in with Windows 8 apps, a toolbar appears. Snap a picture from the right side to bring up what Microsoft calls “Charm’s” icons and access your favorite apps, getting to the Start screen, without having to exit and switch between applications.

Muting:

Switching between Windows 8/7 and 8/7 in a simple manner of dragging an app from one to the other or, “pulling” the app to the foreground. You can then switch between the two applications by tapping the Start button and selecting the one you want to open.

Paid Apps:

You can buy apps from the Windows Store and install them on your PC. You can also purchase apps from other sources, such as developers who sell their apps directly through the Windows Store. You can also purchase apps from third-party developers that are not available in the Windows Store.

Paid apps are more expensive and require a license to use. You can also purchase apps from third-party developers that are not available in the Windows Store.
