Korea’s Central Bank Raises Interest Rate

South Korea’s central bank increased its key interest rate to 7.5%, a 15-year high, Thursday in an attempt to cool overheating economy and contain rising consumer prices. The rate, raised 0.5 percentage point in April, will apply until December.

Korea’s central bank said it raised the key rate because of expectations inflation will soon rise above the government’s 3% target.

A spokesmen said the rate rise is not representative of a shift away from the government’s view that the monetary policy path is more accommodative.

Despite having lost its initial attempt to nab a mid-term criminal and fraud investigation, the Justice Department did not give up, but instead continued its pursuit of a $42 million payment to Boeing, according to a new report.

As a result, the department has been able to secure a payment of $20 million, according to the report, which was issued by the Justice Department.

In the summer season of 2008, while investigating the C-17 plane, the department decided to pursue a related money laundering investigation. In a written statement, an FBI official said the department would have pursued the case had it not been for the money laundering investigation.
