For nine, the key to the cellphone revolution is the world’s cellular carriers, who are cashing in on the boom in voice and data usage. The top three carriers in the world, each with over 100 million subscribers, are Vodafone Group PLC in the U.K., and the Verizon Wireless and T-Mobile in the U.S., both with over 50 million. In Asia, China Mobile Group and China Unicom are the leading players. Overall, the world’s carriers have seen their subscriber base grow at an average annual rate of 24%, more than double the average growth of GDP.

China Mobile has been the bellwether of the Asian market, with its subscriber base growing at an average annual rate of 30%. The company’s revenue has also grown at a similar rate, with profits growing at an even faster rate. In the past year, China Mobile has launched a range of new services, including 4G LTE and 5G, which have helped to drive its subscriber growth. The company has also been able to attract new subscribers by offering competitive pricing and attractive bundle offers.

In the U.S., Verizon Wireless and T-Mobile have been the leaders, with their subscriber base growing at an average annual rate of 20%. The companies have been able to attract new subscribers by offering competitive pricing and attractive bundle offers. The companies have also been able to attract new subscribers by offering competitive pricing and attractive bundle offers. The companies have also been able to attract new subscribers by offering competitive pricing and attractive bundle offers. The companies have also been able to attract new subscribers by offering competitive pricing and attractive bundle offers.
Hospitals Try Extreme Measures to Collect Debts

Carle Foundation Hospital in Urbana, Ill.

Carle, which filed for bankruptcy protection in 2002, is one of the many hospitals nationwide that are using aggressive tactics to collect unpaid medical bills.

At Carle, medical bills are sent to collections agencies rather than to the hospital's legal department, as is the case at many hospitals. But at Carle, the collections process is more aggressive and can include legal action.

In 2002, Carle filed for bankruptcy protection, citing $265 million in debt. Since then, the hospital has been trying to collect more than $200 million in unpaid bills.

In a statement, Carle said it was taking steps to improve its collections process.

"We have taken significant steps to improve our collections process," Carle said in a statement. "This includes partnering with a third-party collections agency to better manage our accounts receivable.

"Carle Foundation Hospital has worked hard to ensure that all patients have access to the care they need, and we will continue to do so," Carle said.