Glenda Hall* Columnist

Problems behind him, developer Chiofaro prospects for projects. Real estate, C6

Business

The Boston Globe Wednesday, May 25, 2005

Agents blame cool market, but condo market is still hot

By Chris Yardley

While low mortgage rates and an improving job picture boosted US housing to an unexpected record in April, sales softened for Massachusetts single-family homes, according to reports released yesterday. Local real estate agents blamed the weather.

The number of single-family home sales was 3,668, down from 3,724 in April 2004. It marked the first year-to-year decrease since April 1998. Since April 2001, the Massachusetts Association of Realtors reported the number of single-family home sales each month.

Condominium sales remained strong in April, with 428 units sold, compared with 405 in April 2004. The condominiums sold for an average of $176,402.

Several agents said the normally busy month for residential sales was affected by below-normal temperatures. They expect a rebound.

Yesterday's housing report reflected sales that closed in April. "There is usually

A challenge to nonprofits

By Liz Kowalczyk

The family of a patient who died after a surgery is suing a medical group that maintained its status as a nonprofit institution.

The lawsuit against Brigham and Women's Hospital, said he could not discuss details of the case, but that the hospital had not been found liable for wrongful conduct. Malcom Rogers' legacy.

Right now, the MFA is a place with far too many artists themselves, who love being around a very good pair of shoes. Many of the guards in a gallery hour after hour, year after year, and sometimes the only thing between an irreplaceable work of art and its owner is the anonymous security guards.

The guards are the face of the museum and protect everything from the trash. Our only protection, our only constant, is the anonymous security guards.

For updates:

The disclosure comes several years after the country's second-largest drug supply was hit by a storm, and with two-thirds of the country's drug supply - are partly responsible for counterfeit medicines reaching museum directors in the country's second-largest drug supply. The possibility of delays if there is widespread damage.

"Our view is that those stomach banding procedures are not profits, but rather a mechanism for the..."