Mohamed Jukaku offers, “After months of hard work, I’m thrilled to announce that my wife and I have launched HerBabyShower.com, an e-commerce destination featuring unique and personalized baby shower favors. We want to help you celebrate one of life’s most precious events! Our little company blurb: Life is a series of milestones to be celebrated, and the favors are an important part of every special occasion. At HerBabyShower.com, we are committed to providing an unmatched selection of high-quality baby shower favors, games, party supplies, and gifts. Combined with our exceptional customer service, we guarantee your celebration to be an unparalleled event... at least, of course, until your next baby shower! For those of you that are social-media savvy, like us on Facebook, follow us on Twitter, and check out our upcoming pin boards on Pinterest. To celebrate our launch, I wanted to extend our special Friends & Family promotion to the Anderson community. Simply use the coupon code ANDERSON when checking out. With this promotion, you can shop the site as often as you like and get 20% off MSRP until June 1, 2013. We look forward to shopping with you on HerBabyShower. Please feel free to reach us at support@herbabyshower.com with any questions or feedback. Thanks in advance for your support!”

Naveen Bhagam shares, “Professionally, my fund in India had 20% returns for the year 2012 and looking forward to another decent year in 2013. The goal is to set the stage for 2014 which is when we think global economy will be back on track. On a separate note, my consulting gig here in U.S. is going well and I have been travelling a lot. My son still thinks he’s been given a timeout for moving back to India—apart from that, family is all settled and happy.”

Alejandra Bravo shares, “After the module of May 2012, I started working as a chief marketing officer in a telecom group in charge of marketing and product development of four companies. The best part of my year was Rumi Kaibara’s and Ashlie Wallace’s visit! We had a great time! Ashlie came with two friends a week before Rumi—she then went on a trip to Patagonia. We had dinner in a Polynesian restaurant where we saw regional dances and we danced too. Rumi came all the way down to the south of Chile, close to Patagonia. I had to work, so she was doing rafting and visiting other places while I was working, but we had time to dine together at night. On the weekend, we went to the farm for horseback riding, to a winery, and to pick up Ash and her friends at the airport to spend the rest of the weekend in Viña del Mar. We had a great time together! Also, my son, Martin, won the most important award of his class this year, so overall he has been behaving... for now!”

Dominic Chan relates, “Matthew Festo and I are now working together. after. The whole family will be busy getting her prepared for that—it is a big deal here in Singapore. Raphael has started walking and has quite a temper! He has not started talking though. Sanita has joined with her friend in a start-up company distributing premium European lingerie in the region. Her business is now gaining some traction and I am happy for her (and sometimes provide her unwelcomed consultation based on what I have learned from the MBA program). I have also started learning about coaching—something that I may consider picking up in the near future. If any classmates are interested to embark on that learning journey together, let me know. I am planning to attend the Latvian Song and Dance Festival in 2013. Hopefully it will not clash with our graduation ceremony. Any classmates who are interested to join me will be welcomed. I can help arrange the logistics.

Amit Chopra has named 2012, “Year of the Biggest Loser.” He writes, “While most people focus on career once they are done with the MBA program, I had to switch priorities to focus on first getting my health back. In September I started to focus on regular workouts and improved my eating habits significantly to the effect of dropping almost 50 pounds (that’s 22 kgs for my non-American friends!). It’s never felt this good before to be called a ‘loser.’ Wish everyone a great 2013 and looking forward to catching up with all of you in Singapore later this year.”

Julie Escobar updates, “Maxim spent his first Thanksgiving with me and my friends in Los Angeles. I bought my first turkey . . . I did not cook it myself but we still had a great time. After having a great dinner and feeling thankful for all the great things in our lives, we decided to go downtown to look for homeless and give them each a warm plate of food—we found some souls in the street who were happy to have a Thanksgiving meal. Professionally I am fully responsible for growing business all over Asia. I will be traveling every quarter and I hope to see more of my classmates. My goals for 2013: Make a lot of money, do more Yoga, become a Zumba Instructor, and travel to Brazil to do some kitesurfing!”

Julie Escobar

Matthew Festo has met one of his goals in joining the EMBA program by getting employment as a business unit manager with PCI Limited, working for our classmate, Dominic Chan. Matthew completed his migration to Singapore at the end of the year and Minny, his fiance, has joined him as well. Matthew and Minny officially tied the knot February 8, 2013 at San Francisco City Hall. With all the newly-found free time, Matt plans to (finally) take Chinese language lessons.

Rumi Kaibara shares, “After finishing up the EMBA, I was promoted to director and am taking more responsibilities at Green Stamp. For the Japanese government project, we organized the Women and Sport Leadership Conference 2012 in Tokyo, inviting international delegates, Japanese Olympic Committees, and the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology. I successfully formed partnerships within international sports organizations in the past 6 months: the Women’s Sports Foundation and University of Michigan (USA), CS4L (Canada), CAAWS (Canada), CAC (Canada), IWG (Finland), and WSFF (England). My highlight this year was definitely the amazing trip to Chile visiting Alejandra Bravo and spending time with her family, horseback riding at Ale’s family’s farm, river rafting, and wine tasting. We also joined Ashlie Wallace and her friends for the last few days and it was such a nice reunion for the Intake 8 in Chile. In recognition of the HappyDoll activities in India and Singapore, on behalf of the Intake 8 HappyDoll team, I received the 2012 HappyDoll Benefactors Award. With your generosity, support, and dedication, our team connected with hundreds of children and brought a smile to their faces, thank you HappyDoll Team!”

Updates from Michael Leek: “The graduation in Los Angeles last August also signaled the end of a 1 1/2-year of travelling around the world. We made a final stop in New York on our way home to Denmark and had the pleasure of one evening of personal guidance from New York party girl numero uno Rumi Kaibara. Back home, we have spent, more or less, the last quarter of 2012 getting used to being back—back into our apartment, back to the job, back into the routines, and not to mention, back to the wet and cold Scandinavian weather. I am back in my old consultancy company, now being responsible for a service-line consisting of 30 consultants working with process improvements.”

Updates from Ivan Loh: “After bidding the class farewell in Los Angeles, Daphne and I spent a week in Hawaii before heading back to Singapore. Work wise, Bugis Street is busy as usual. I applied to SPRING, a Singapore government agency, in November 2012 for a sizable grant to develop and launch the Bugis Street online platform. They invited me to participate in an e-commerce study visit delegation to the U.S. in April to learn from the big boys, like Amazon, Zappos, and Apple. I guess that is a sign that the content I came up with for the application is looking positive. I went back to NUS in December to attend the mandatory one-week program with the local MBAs. The classes were a bit of an overlap with our last segmental UCLA but I did meet a few business owners that were looking to expand their operations in emerging markets. Since then, I have set up and registered a consulting firm with a couple of partners. The company is called Kingbridge Global Consulting Group. It was quite an experience setting it up. Essentially, the firm specializes in being the enabler for enterprises looking for opportunities to grow their businesses in emerging/foreign markets by leveraging on expert business analytics and an extensive global network. The company also plays matchmaker to ready and available projects/business opportunities by assisting clients in identifying suitable candidates (investors, suppliers, vendors, etc.) worldwide. I’m starting to build the foundation now, so we’ll see how far I can take this.”

Vincent Low ponders, “On the professional end, nothing much—exploring a possible new role for next year but it’s not confirmed. On personal side, I have been enjoying the “free” time with family and the baby is finally warming up to me (which isn’t necessarily a good thing when she is crying or grumpy).”

On the personal front, I completed the Disney half-marathon, and have done another two ‘halves’ since then. I’m currently training for a triathlon in Hawaii at spring break—if you’re going to exercise, there ought to be a reward! Updates from Danny Thien: “My older daughter just started kindergarten—her first steps towards UCLA! Younger daughter is one year old and has literally just taken her first steps. On the professional front, I have just been appointed global practice lead for Utopia’s Master Data Governance practice area. Work has been keeping me very busy. On the side, I’m exploring opportunities to start a business in Vietnam. Still in the early stages though, but putting the research from our management practicum into good use.”

Foo Tuan Tong (TT) has had a busy year: “My younger daughter is an ongoing project which started just before my Bangalore segment. She is clearly my biggest achievement in 2012, easily beating graduating from the MBA course. On the professional front, I recently joined Ajmair Heer at Cisco Systems.
