PAID SUMMER INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITY FOR CURRENT MBA/FEMBA STUDENTS

APPLY YOUR MBA SKILLS AS A STRATEGIC CONSULTANT FOR OUR MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

Developed by:
UCLA Harold and Pauline Price Center for Entrepreneurship & Innovation
Message From Elaine Hagan ('91),
Associate Dean and Executive Director,
Harold and Pauline Price Center for Entrepreneurship & Innovation

The Price Center is pleased to offer an exciting paid summer internship opportunity for MBA and FEMBA students who will serve as strategic consultants in two of our management development programs for community-based organizations: the UCLA Head Start Management Fellows Program and the UCLA/Johnson & Johnson Health Care Executive Program. The students who are selected as consultants will oversee teams of nonprofit leaders in health care and early childhood education, coaching and advising program participants as they develop strategic improvement plans for their organizations. This role will allow you to reinforce what you’ve learned in the MBA classroom and further develop your coaching, advising and mentoring skills as you become part of a learning community of Anderson faculty, staff, fellow students and program participants. You will also be joining an impressive network of Anderson alumni who, like you, sought summer internships with impact, and have gone on to assume a wide range of leadership roles in the public and private sectors. Come join us to learn more!

About the Harold and Pauline Price Center for Entrepreneurship & Innovation Programs

For 30 years, the Price Center has provided innovative entrepreneurial leadership and management development programs for the owners and managers of growing businesses and for the leaders of community-based organizations. The programs help leaders develop an entrepreneurial mindset while improving their managerial capacity, expanding the ability of their organizations to deliver high-quality services and achieve desirable financial and social outcomes.

UCLA Head Start Management Fellows Program (HSMFP)
The UCLA Head Start Management Fellows Program is a national training program designed to develop and strengthen the entrepreneurial management skills of Head Start executives who provide comprehensive services to nearly 1 million economically disadvantaged children and their families each day. Conducted by the Price Center, the program was sponsored previously by Johnson & Johnson from 1991 to 2015. At the conclusion of the 2019 program, 1,600 Head Start executives have completed the training.

Professor Alfred E. Osborne, Jr., who is currently the Senior Associate Dean at UCLA Anderson, serves as the faculty director of this program.

UCLA/Johnson & Johnson Foundation Health Care Executive Program (HCEP)

Since 2002, this 11-day residential program has helped build the entrepreneurial competence of executives from community-based health care and AIDS service organizations, enhancing their capacity to expand the quality and quantity of care, treatment and support delivered to underserved and vulnerable populations around the country. The HCEP is specifically designed and especially valuable for organizations to plan for and/or implement shifts in their organizational strategies to confront the new environment for health care delivery.

Victor Tabbush, adjunct professor emeritus at UCLA Anderson, serves as the faculty director of this program.

What a previous consultant has to say

“My role as a consultant has provided me with a phenomenal opportunity to hone my strategic planning and problem-solving skills, and put what I learned in the MBA curriculum to work. I was also inspired by the program fellows, who showed incredible work ethic and dedication to the betterment of their organizations.”

Kayla Coutts (’19)

Why You Should Consider Applying for the Strategic Consultant Position

Do you have a passion for social impact? Do you want to apply your newly developed MBA skills in real time? Do you want more opportunities to network with our fantastic faculty and nonprofit leaders in community health care and early childhood education?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you should consider applying to becoming a strategic consultant for the Price Center Management Development Programs for Community-Based Organizations. As a strategic consultant, you will be working in small groups to facilitate learning sessions focused on problem solving, strategy and leadership. You will also serve as a one-on-one coach for participants as they conduct organizational assessments, project planning and goal setting while developing and finalizing their organizational improvement projects. Ultimately, you will help participants generate a plan that addresses an identified organizational weakness or a business opportunity that will advance the impact of the organization.

This experience offers a competitive salary and will connect you with an incredible network of nonprofit leaders across the country, as well as to UCLA Anderson faculty members and fellow students.

What previous consultants have to say

“The strategic consultant experience has allowed me to put into practice and teach others what I have learned during my MBA experience, helping others gain skills that will allow them to solve complex issues within their organizations for the remainder of their careers. Working with the participants has changed me for the better.”

Kristin Dicenso (’19)

“When I joined the Head Start and HCEP team last summer, I received a hands-on opportunity to apply my MBA education by working with the leaders of real organizations to develop new strategies to help solve pressing problems. Working with my group of Fellows to help them apply the concepts that they learned during the program was extremely rewarding and fun.”

Sana Rahim (’19)
What a previous consultant has to say

“Being able to contribute toward the Head Start and HCEP programs has been one of my most rewarding experiences thus far at UCLA Anderson. I was able to bridge theory and practice by applying my education to assist those in positions to make positive changes in their organizations.”
